ON A TOUR OF INSPECTION

An Old Prospector Gains Valuable Information

Concerning the Various Mineral Veins in Our District--Made Trip Over LaRue Vein

OTHER NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

A few days ago in order to gain some information concerning the formations of the LaRue vein, I made a trip over the vein beginning at the Big Four mine on the LaRue vein, to the Crittenden Mine on the LaRue vein, and then to the LaRue vein, and finally examined each mine on the LaRue vein, and in examining some of these properties it made me feel sick and caused me to wonder what kind of people these were who were telling such mines in idleness. I visited the Big Four mine with a view of lead and fluor spar not equalled anywhere in the United States for its immense body of ore, the ore coming out within eighteen inches of the surface with as fine walls as man ever worked upon, with a dip of about eighty feet. Take a look at the favorable surroundings. An immense body of high grade ore, timber on property, water, an unfailing supply, within 100 feet of shaft, a fine wagon road to railroad or river, and then see what kind of feelings you will have for the company that will sit still and refuse to make money easy. Across the creek northeast about 100 feet from the Big Four is located the old LaRue mine that twenty-five years ago was worked for its lead alone. It now has a shaft near 100 feet deep in the body of lead, zinc and fluor spar ore, with an open cut northeast of shaft about 200 feet long and from which fluor spar, lead and zinc has been mined to a depth of fifteen feet. This property has everything at hand (with the exception of a little grit) to make one of the largest slippers in the district. Next to that lies the Cartwright mine, with 200 to 250 tons of lead, zinc and fluor spar ore waiting to be hauled to the Sanders Ore Separating mill at Marion to make it a high grade marketable product. Here they have a No. 1 stamp plant, a fine timbered double compartment shaft between 150 and 200 feet in depth with 34 feet of rich ore and nine feet of ore assaying from 10 to 15 per cent. metallic zinc. They broke and hoisted enough ore at the 200 foot level in two hours in the Nancy-Hanka mine one day last week to mill 1800 pounds of lead concentrates.

The Columbia Mining Company, Grant Davidson superintendent, have their shaft 71 feet deep, have gone through 65 feet of slate and at that depth encountered limestone with seams of calcite. The outlook is very encouraging.

At the Hopewell mine Mr. Jim Hopewell, the superintendent, is installing the new machinery at the new shaft, the same being hoisted for 200 feet with orders to rush. Charges prepaid.

C. S. Knight shipped eight car loads of spar from the Ripley mine last week.

Double Wedding

The parlor of Hotel Crittenden was a scene of much interest for a few minutes Thursday afternoon, November 22, about one o'clock. There were two weddings, which was the cause of the interest.

Mr. John Holdman and Miss Annie Culley; Mr. Hugh Witherspoon and Mrs. Rosa Denny were the contracting parties.

They came in on the noon train, neither couple knowing of the other's intention until they arrived at the hotel.

Mr. John Culley and Miss Vera Holdman accompanied the former couple. Rev. T. A. Conaway officiated at both weddings.

A New Restaurant

Ira Pierce and George Givens are starting a first class restaurant and lunch counter. Their stand is the new building of Judge J. P. Pierce on Salem street immediately west of the old Pierce hardware house. This room they have divided and propose to have the lunch counter separate from the restaurant proper. They have secured the services of Geo. Fortman and will serve meals or lunches.

and make it pay a dividend. All of the above mentioned mines are owned by different companies and the majority are now residents. Some of them have not been in this district for two years and do not know of the progress that has been made in that time. I understand that some of the mines were shut down because the ore was not marketable and had no separation for the ore. I say to you come and let the Sanders "sight" you. Take a drive and look at a few of the mines that the people who own them had the courage and confidence in the district to go just a little deeper than you have gone. Such mines as the Klondike, Nancy Hooks and Hollen in Livingston county that can't get wagons enough to keep the ore out of the way, and in Crittenden the Hopewell that has 12 feet of lead and spar at 200 feet, the Ada-Florence just yards northeast on same vein, the Memphis with a 100 foot stope. The Ashridge and Tabor that pays a dividend on the smallest amount of capital invested of any mines in the district. The Pogue, Matthews and the "Big Riley" that shipped eighteen car loads of ore last week and dozens of others just as good that you can see on a visit to our district. After you have made this trip, go home, hire you an Irishman (by the job) that is quick with his feet, you take the first stage then night him to where he will find the others and have him to awaken them to the fact that there is some good in kicking if it's the right kind, and don't stop until you have some money in the treasury then employ you a foreman that knows how to mine. You take care of the business end and see how soon you will have a mine you will be proud of.

The Sanders Ore Separating Company of this place are now engaged in working a quantity of ore from "nine acres" owned by Blue & Nunn. Messrs. Blue & Nunn delivered to this company 2000 pounds of ore from their nine acre tract. This has all been run through the crushers and over the tables and is now being tested as we go to press. There is no doubt at all but what they will make the separation all right. Mr. Nunn says the product of the tables looks good enough to ship.

The Drummer's Lament

Bill McElroy travels for a large wholesale clothing establishment and makes the South as part of his territory. He is just off of a trip through Mississippi and has a complaint. He says the principal part of the cotton crop in the state is nearly ruined. The rain has beaten the cotton on the ground and it has been stained. Cotton that would ordinarily bring 10 cents per pound will not bring but 2 1/2 cents now and as a consequence the merchants are doing nothing. Before he finished his lament though he admitted that his trade had increased in other sections and would probably show an increase on the whole.

Mr. McElroy is a good salesman and quite popular with the trade.

He Loses His Roof

Friday night of last week there was quite a storm and the wind blew furiously. Blackhawk and family were housed on the Glendale property now owned by John Scheas and operated by Mr. J. M. Persons.

The wind finally got a good under hold and lifted the roof off. Blackhawk shoved his bed around trying to find a dry spot but could not. Water gathered in the room and it looked like swimming for a while.

This is the property on which is located the Leona mines operated by Mr. Persons. At the depth now attained there is a vein of spar and lead eleven feet wide.

Arrived Monday

Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin Andres arrived in the city Monday at noon from Henderson, where they had been the guest of Mr. Andres relatives.

They were entertained at luncheon by Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Drescher, and Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson who gave a reception in their honor, the same evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Andres will go to house-keeping in the manse right away. They were the recipients of quite a number of beautiful and valuable presents.

Audubon Party

Mrs. James H. A. Haynes and J. I. Clement very delightfully entertained a number of friends at the Haynes home on West Bellville street last Friday afternoon from two to five o'clock at an Audubon party. After enjoying the contests, which were pertaining to birds, the guests were invited to the dining room where an elegant three course lunch was served amidst decorations of beautiful birds and flowers. The favors consisted of pink and white chrysanthemums.

OPERA HOUSE

Monday Night, November 26, A Home Spun Heart Will be Presented.

Manager Rheinlander announces for Monday night Nov. 26, "A Homespun Heart," Hal Reid's successful pastoral play and that Marion theater patrons are to have a treat without saying. "A Homespun Heart" is one of the bright hits of the season. It seems to be just what the people want. An interesting story and plot that holds ones attention throughout the entire act. A comedy, the kind of comedy without coarseness and the play is so constructed as to admit of some vaudeville stunts which are between act features.

He Will Sigh You

If you have a tract of land and believe you have mineral and don't know where to dig I will show you.

If you have a shaft and no ore let me show you in what direction to cross cut.

I know every hog path, and every vein in the lead, zinc and fluor spar district.

Address, JOHN HARPENDING, Marion, Ky. Care of Crittenden Springs Hotel.

Photographic Fire

Wednesday night Marion had another fire. The photographic gallery of Mr. T. H. Kingston and E. W. Cridler caught fire by some unaccountable means and burned the top off as well as the contents. Total loss on contents was $168.86. The insurance on contents was $81.45.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

County Judge Blackburn Appoints Board of Tax Supervisors

The county judge appoints in regular county court day in November a board of tax supervisors to supervise and revise and raise and lower (?) the tax lists of the county tax payers.

Monday, November 12 Judge Walter Blackburn appointed the following to act:

Geo. T. Belt, John T. Pickens, W. T. Terry, Geo. F. Wilson, Charlie Fox. These gentlemen will meet the first Monday in January and remain in session not more than six days at first meeting. They will then adjourn and give the sheriff time to notify those that have been raised to meet the board at some time set by them and show cause why the raise in taxes should not be made permanent.

DIES AT TULSA, I. T.

Bishop John J. Tigert Died Wednesday Morning

Bishop Tigert is dead. He died Wednesday morning at Tulsa, I. T. The immediate cause of his death was blood poisoning. He was sick only about one week.

Bishop Tigert was elevated to the high office he held last May at the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South held at Birmingham. He was elected on the first ballot receiving twenty-three more votes than was necessary to a choice. Next Sunday he would have been fifty years old. He is survived by a wife and six children.

Marion people remember Dr. Tigert well. He attended the general conference held here and at that time it was predicted by those in the best position to know that he would be elected a bishop. At the time conference was held in Marion the Presbyterian pulpit was filled at 11 o'clock on Sunday by Dr. Gross Alexander and at night by Dr. Tigert. The subject of his discourse on that occasion was the "Prodigal Son." It was heard by an appreciative audience.

Four Crops Each Year

Something has been said in these columns several times of Mr. R. N. Dorr, of Wichita, Kans., known to us as Little Dick.

In Mr. Dorr's office in the city building he has a clerk by the name of Jesse Leland. This man Leland has a small place in the outskirts of Wichita. A house and lot and one and one-half acres of ground. This season Mr. Leland had his one and a half acre farm in alfalfa. He has at this writing cut four crops of alfalfa hay in all amounting to 15 tons. This brings $15 per ton right there. From one and a half acre Mr. Leland has cleared $225 less cost of seed and cutting.

Mrs. Ella Gray Dead.

Mrs. Maria Gray, the widow of the late James H. Gray, died Sunday, Nov. 18. She was stricken with pneumonia and lived only a few days.

Before her marriage in 1882 she was a Miss Miles, sister of Mr. Lucien Miles and an aunt of Mrs. G. C. Gray, both of this city. She is survived by seven children, James, Benjamin, Cade, Charles, John, Lucien, and Mrs. C. D. Nelson, all of Salem.

The interment took place at the old Miles cemetery, Monday.

A Lucky Colored Man.

Jack Cruce, a lucky man. His pension has been increased from $10 per month to $17 and Jack is correspondingly happy. It was reported that he got a check for $2000 back pay but this was a mistake. He may get some back pay, but nothing like $2000.

Appointed Postmaster

A special telegram has been received as we go to press stating that Mr. James H. Walker has been appointed postmaster for Salem, Livingston county. He is appointed in place of Lan Harpending resigned.

LeRoy Lightfoot

Mr. LeRoy Lightfoot, of Henderson, was in town this week. Mr. Lightfoot is a special agent for the Oliver Type-writer Co. He also has an art store in Henderson.

Patronize Home Industry

As we are about to get together an organization to be known as the Marion Commercial Club to further the interests of New Marion, first, we think we should try and patronize the few industries that we have by using their outputs, such as flour, etc. We can relate an occurrence of a few days ago. A gentleman drove up to the Marion Milling Co.'s doors and unloaded an extra large load of grain; as he started to turn his team around Mr. Nunn, secretary and treasurer, of this institution, was standing on the platform, so the gentleman turned and said to him, "be sure and give me something good, as I have come a long way, about 13 miles. A friend told me that you made the best flour in this part of the country." After Mr. Nunn completed his story about how good that flour would be that he expected to get in return for his grain, he also asked him if he didn't want to buy a few groceries, hardware and dry goods? So he said "that he would." Mr. Nunn told him this was the place to buy them. He came off up town and after returning he made a statement that he had spent about sixty dollars in Marion, and if it had not been for the mill this money would have been spent somewhere else. Patronize your home laundry and use your mill's flour and try and induce outside capital to invest with us.

A Crittenden Boy in Kansas

Mr. Charles Calvin Hill, of Calista, Kingman county, Kans., is an old Crittenden county boy. He is the son of Mr. E. P. Hill. He left this country about twelve years ago to try his fortune in the West.

Calista, Kans., is a small railroad station about the size of Crayneville and is fifteen miles from Kingman and fifty miles from Wichita.

Charlie Hill is about the whole thing. He is depot agent, postmaster and store keeper. He is also the coal man and weightmaster. All the cattle of that country are weighed on his scales. He owns and runs a good store, supplying quite a scope of country with goods.

At this time his father, Mr. Ezekiel Porter Hill, is with him. Mr. Hill married Miss Lena Mayes, who used to live in Crittenden county.

J. HANDY MOORE KILLED

By A Run Away Team--Was Well Known in Marion

A telegram was received by E. J. Hayward Wednesday afternoon announcing the death of Mr. Handy Moore, of Charleston, Missouri.

He was driving a span of horses which he had owned for some time, they became frightened and ran away, throwing him out of the vehicle and it is supposed he was killed instantly.

Mr. Moore is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Hayward and has visited Marion a number of times. He has dealt some in real estate in this county.

Educational Column

TWO THINGS.

1st. No teacher should enter the school room with the idea that he or she is the only pebble on the educational beach. You have a predecessor and will have a successor. Professional courtesy demands that you speak well of your predecessor. He made mistakes but all of us are guilty of that charge. Methods of two teachers are alike and yet both can be and in most instances are right. Your ways are your own, and tho' some pupils insist that Mr. So and so did not do that way, a little clever diplomacy can be brought to bear without either giving offense or losing your own individuality. The right sort of teacher is the only true diplomat of the great common people. That old, old saying, "Talent is something but tact is everything" is true to a dot in the teacher's life and both can be used profitably.

2nd. As to your successor much can be done that will make his work much more pleasant than otherwise. One way is a properly arranged Teachers' Register. Tho' they are not filled out to the extent they should be, neither are they used as a guide as much as should be; no one can deny that they are very practical, helpful guides.

Again at the end of the first week of school your successor can write your biography as a disciplinarian. The way lessons are prepared will reveal your thoroughness or lack of it. The forms of written work will portray your neatness and orderliness. These are little things, but they are the indexes to your character and that which you have endeavored to shape your pupils into. They are worth remembering, worth heeding.

BAPTISTS ARE GETTING ACTIVE

Gives $100,000 For University—Theodore Harris Donor of Rich Gift

Prospect of a great Baptist University in Louisville that in time will equal the great Baptist institution in Chicago developed at an educational mass-meeting of Louisville Baptists held at Broadway Baptist church under the auspices of the Kentucky Baptist Education Society at which $105,000 was subscribed for the cause within a few minutes. One hundred thousand dollars of the amount was the gift of Theodore Harris, President of the Louisville Nashville Banking Company. With a like gift previously subscribed by Dr. A. Catliff, of Williamsburg, Ky., the society now has on hand $205,000 of a fund of $500,000 to be raised in an educational campaign of which the mass-meeting last evening was the first step.

The new Pure Food and Drug Law will mark it on the label of every Cough Cure containing Opium, Chloroform or any other stupefying or poisonous drug. But it passes Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure as made for 20 years; entirely free. Dr. Shoop's all along has bitterly opposed opiates or narcotics. Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is absolutely safe even for the youngest babe—and it cures, it does not simply suppress. Get a safe and reliable Cough Cure, by simply insisting on having Dr. Shoop's. Let the law be your protection. We cheerfully recommend and sell it. Haynes & Taylor.

Cartersville, Ga., Nov. 9.—Rev. Sam P. Jones left an estate estimated at $250,000, consisting largely of properties in Atlanta, Cartersville and other points. Those in position to speak authoritatively say that for many years Mr. Jones income was from $35,000 to $40,000 a year from his evangelical and lecture work.

Of this great sum he annually gave away to charitable work more than two-thirds of his earnings. His benefactors were so wide and varied that few but his own family knew of them. He rarely spoke of them, and sought to keep them from the public.

His life insurance was fully $75,000 and this, of course, will go to his estate. It is believed that his wife will administer his estate.

What's In a Man

"All the constituents of a 150 pound man are contained in 1,200 eggs," said the chemist.

"There is enough gas in a man," he went on, "to fill a gasometer of 3,649 cubic feet. There is enough iron to make four nails. There is enough fat to make 35 candles and a large cake of soap. There is enough phosphorus to make 8,064 boxes of matches.

"Furthermore, that man who is aeronautical will be pleased to know that there is enough hydrogen in him to fill a balloon and carry him up to the clouds.

The remaining constituents of a man would yield, if utilized, six cruets of salt, a bowl of sugar and ten gallons of water."

THE GREAT SANDTOWN TURKEY THEFT

A Story of a Mean Man and a Mean Deed That Was Its Own Reward.

Noah Wamskittle was a mean man; one of those mean people who hate to see others prosperous, even though it does not interfere with them at all.

He lived in Sandtown and raised turkeys, like everybody else. He earned a lot of money, because he fattened his turkeys well. It was his only generous deed, for he begrudged even the food that he gave himself, and as for others! Well, Deacon Vandertassel once said that Noah Wamskittle was so mean that he would walk three miles to borrow a match rather than use one of his own to light his fire in the morning.

Noah Wamskittle did not like Deacon Vandertassel at all, and he liked him even less after he heard this.

So some days before Thanksgiving day, he went to a poor man in Sandtown and said to him:

"You know that we will all have to ship our turkeys to-morrow. Now, you have only 50 and if you do not get a good price for them you will be hard pressed for money this winter. Well, I know a way to make the price higher for you. If you will go to Deacon Vandertassel's place with twisting and turning, till Noah was nearly dead and only his great mean-ness kept him going.

At last, scratched and bruised and full of mud, weary and suffering, he fell into a deep mudhole, which, strangely enough, had been avoided cleverly by poor but honest Hill.

"Never mind," whispered Hill, helping him up, "we have arrived."

Noah looked through the underbrush, but he could see nothing except a black mass of something in the darkness.

"Those are the barns," said Hill. "Here, take this saw and saw holes into the walls there and I will creep around the other way and scare the turkeys so they will come out."

Noah, madder and meaner than ever, worked hard and sawed big holes, out of which the turkeys scuttled. Then, as Hill scared them up, off they flew into the woods until the whole big flock had vanished.

As soon as the last one had gone, poor but honest Hill seized Noah and said: "We must hurry back and we must go the same way we came."

"Oh, dear, oh, dear," groaned Noah.

"I See It All," He Moaned.

that night we can cut holes into his turkey houses and let all his birds fly into the woods. He will be quite unable to catch them again in time for shipment and the people in the city will be glad to pay you high prices for yours."

The poor man, whose name was Bill Leggo, made believe to agree with the mean man but really he did not agree with him at all, for he came of poor but honest parents, and was very much like them himself. So he devised a cunning plan.

That night he went to Noah's house and said to him: "Let us go to do this deed. But we will have to go into the woods just behind your house and work around through them for several miles, so as to approach the deacon's place through the underbrush in the back. It would never do for us to be seen."

"That is a good idea," said Noah. "But I do not know the way through the woods."

"I will guide you," said poor but honest Hill. "I fear, however, that you will find it rough going, for we cannot dare to carry a lantern."

He took hold of Noah's arm and off they went, up and down and in and out, through thick and thin and thorn and swamp, this way and that way.

THE FESTIVAL OF HOME.

Thanksgiving Pre-eminently The Day of Family Gatherings.

The good old New England festival of Thanksgiving is one that age does not wither nor custom stale. Originally, and still nominally, a distinctly religious festival, it appeals to all, whether old or young, whether professedly religious or not, and whatever may be their religious belief or convictions.

To college boys and football teams the day may seem to be of special significance in reference to triumphs or disasters on the gridiron field, but even to these it carries another and deeper significance which will grow with the years. And to those of mature years, men and women past 40, for example, this gracious, time-honored festival serves to punctuate their lives, so to speak, and marks the passage of years perhaps even more distinctly than New Year's day or birth days. For Thanksgiving is pre-eminently the festival of home, the day of all others when home ties and associations assert their sway the strongest linking the present with the past and binding all to the future. All who are happy enough to have a home and hearth turn gladly to it for rest and refreshment of body and mind, and whether present or absent from the home circle, that is the center and in-spiration of their thoughts.

Perhaps to none is the day more full of associations and memories than to those who cannot thus join the home circle. The toiler in the city or in the country, unable even for a day to quit his duties, still takes pleasure in thinking of those at home, and in imagination at least takes his place at the annual home gathering and shares the pleasure of the day.

PROCLAMATION
BY GOV. ANDROS
WHEREAS, the day of

... So strong was the spirit of our Ancestors that when the defeated Gov. Andros issued his Thanksgiving proclamation they refused to eat turkey, just to spite him."

Notwithstanding a quite prevalent opinion to the contrary for which certain historical writers are largely responsible Thanksgiving is a day for family reunions, feasting and social enjoyment, is practically a modern institution, owing to its present importance in the minds to the convenience of travel that came Massachusetts for generations were solely religious observances, while that famous Plymouth celebration of 1621 was a harvest festival never described as Thanksgiving by its promoters and having no religious significance whatever, so far as known.

Moreover, it comprised not merely a single day of feasting and merry-making but a whole week of it, and was designed solely for recreation after many months of privation and adversity.

There is no record of a similar joyous celebration in our annals for generations after that, the Thanksgivings referred to in subsequent years until after the revolution having been nearly as strictly religious affairs as Sunday itself and so far as we have any existing evidence not greatly given to gastronomy. No mention of Thanksgiving is found in a contemporary list of holidays for merry-making as late as 1790.

Until as late as the war of 1812, or later, Thanksgiving was not a regular annual affair, either its appointment being in recognition of special blessings either spiritual or material, and usually deferred until such an excuse for its appointment offered, even though it might be for two or three years, as was frequently the case. It usually came in the autumn however, and generally a beautiful harvest was mentioned as an accidental cause.
For more than 40 years after the arrival of the Pilgrims Thanksgiving was observed by the Indians and its powerful religious character and high as obligatory as was their own to any law of the country which that earlier with it a legal penalty.

with the introduction of the steam

The holiday observance in the ancients of the people of the Middle Ages often referred to an ancient New England Thanksgiving which is said to have been observed as early as 1621.

Harvest Festivals of Old.

Man is so constituted that he is forever straining for blessings from afar while overlooking those at his feet.
With our insatiable desire for material possessions we are prone to forget the ethical and spiritual import of Thanksgiving. To call forth our gratitude we must have more and more things. We must be able to display an array of brilliant tangible objects.
Moreover, we must have sumptuous repasts, rich wines and heavy silver to be in a position to offer up grateful thanks to the Almighty Source
"whence all blessings flow."

It seems we cannot be thankful for a little good despite the dictum that "man wants but little here below."
We cannot show our gratitude unless it be for an "abundance"—hence man's petitioning the Higher Powers with prayers and sacrifices from the time of the patriarchs to our own day—for more and ever more goods of the earth.

The harvest coming after the care and toil of tilling the soil, the sowing of seed and anxious watching of the fields, has therefore been almost universally set apart as a time for special thanks or Thanksgiving. However, so far as we know, no other nation carries out this custom regularly every year on a specially appointed day, hence Thanksgiving Day has come to be regarded as a distinctively American festival.

It is interesting to observe that while Thanksgiving Day as we know it is a peculiarly American festival, harvest festivals were celebrated more than 5,000 years ago. For instance, the Jewish Sukkot (Festival of Booths) or Feast of the Tabernacles, was a harvest or "ingathering" festival held from the 15th to the 22nd of the tenth month, the first and eighth day reserved for holy convocation.

According to religious usage, the people left their houses and came forth to live in the booths or tents made of twigs, branches and brushwood, during the holy season of eight days. The interior of the booths were made festive with shrubs and foliage and especially the leaves and fruit of the palm, the "goodly tree" of Palestine. (The Jewish people of the Orthodox faith in many places still observe this festival in its original

All Can Be Thankful.
In spite of the sorrows of life the young and old all have something to be thankful for. Indeed, Jeremy Taylor held that "the privative blessings
—the blessings of immunity, safeguard, liberty and integrity—which we enjoy, deserve the thanksgiving of a whole life." Each family knows what it should be thankful for at the present moment, and the spirit of the day will lead them to remember it, and by remembering it they are made better morally and spiritually.

FRIDAY, NOV. 23, 1906.

The Democratic primary is over! S. W. Hager is the nominee of that party for Governor. The question arises as to who the Republicans will run for that important office. All will readily agree that it should be some one of undoubted integrity, a campaigner of much experience and ability; a promoter of Republican ideas and Republican principles; it should be some one well versed in State affairs, one who could go upon the stump and expose Democratic extravagance and machine graft. Such a person is the Hon. E. T. Franks, of Owensboro, Ky., who was born and reared in this county. If there are any who ever doubted his ability as a forcible, argumentative and logical speaker, his efforts in the Ninth Congressional district in behalf of Hon. Joseph B. Bennett's candidacy for Congress in the recent campaign, must satisfy them that he has not a superior in the State as a campaign orator. A Republican of unquestioned loyalty, a person of pre-eminent purity, faithful to every trust, the people of Crittenden county would be proud to follow his banner to victory as the standard bearer of the Republican party in the next gubernatorial contest.

Piney Creek Meeting

Editors of THE RECORD:—Please publish the following report of Piney Creek meeting.

The service commenced the first Sunday in November and continued two weeks and the church was much revived. There were seven additions to the church by baptism and many Christians that were living in a lukewarm state came out boldly for Christ and his cause. The good seed sown will spring up to the glory of God.

Bro. Thomas Woodall, the organist, assisted in the singing. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Vaughn, did the preaching and he was blessed and made happy by seeing so many good results from his concentrated labors. To God be all the glory.

LOCAL OPTION ELECTION

To Be Held in Crittenden County on December 7, 1906.

To the Voters of Crittenden County:

Public notice has been given that on Friday, December 7, 1906, a local option election will be held in our county. On that day the people of this county shall say by their votes whether the saloon shall remain here and continue its evil work or whether it shall be driven from us. That drunkenness is a great evil and curse is not questioned, and that the saloon contributes to this evil can not be doubted by the most casual observer. The saloon is against the home, the school, the church and the moral and religious welfare of the people. Shall we keep it with us to do such work and commit such evil? The good people of Crittenden county must say on December 7.

We believe the great majority of our people are opposed to the saloon and the whisky traffic; therefore let them come out on the above mentioned day and record their votes against them.

About 84 of the 119 counties of our fair state, besides districts in the counties are under local option, not less than thirteen having gone "dry" in the past three months. Let good old Crittenden add another to the honored list. But recently our neighbor, Union county, gave over one thousand majority for the local option law. Let us do likewise.

CRITTENDEN RECORD:

I have been requested by the anti-saloon campaign committee to contribute a few items for publication in this week's issue of the RECORD, and so here they are:

Let everybody read, think and act as they will wish they had done when they come to stand before God in the judgment at the last great day.

1. Local option election throughout the county on Friday, Dec. 7. Let every legal voter remember the day and be sure to go to the polls and cast his vote for temperance and reform.

2. During the last few months about fifteen counties in our beloved State have gone "dry" by voting out the saloons, and several others are expected to do the same thing very soon. This makes now about eighty-five entire counties in the State under local option. Now let the good people of old Crittenden fall into line and go the polls on Dec. 7, and score another victory against the open saloon and for home and country.

3. A great wave of temperance reform seems to be sweeping over the civilized world and the "dry" are winning glorious victories over the "wets" almost everywhere. Let the good work go on, and may such a wave sweep over old Crittenden on Dec. 7th, that not one saloon will be left to tell the story of its former existence.

4. The most expensive, corrupt and demoralizing institution that we have in our land today is the open saloon. This is admitted on all sides and by all classes. This being the case then why not get rid of the saloon? What answer will the voters of old Crittenden make to this question on Dec. 7th? We shall wait and see.

5. A great deal is being said in these days of ours upon the subject of patriotism or love for home and country. For this our statesmen and politicians make great pretensions and for this many of our noblest and best men will quit the home of their loved ones and go to the front of the battle in order to defend the honor of their home and country. Now it seems to many of us that the most patriotic question today before the people of Kentucky in general, and in Crittenden county in particular, is that of local option. This being the case, is not this a most suitable time for every good citizen of the county to show their patriotism by going to the polls on the 7th day of December and voting against the saloon and for temperance and reform? Surely it seems so to us. Respectfully,

J. H. BUTLER.

Is Prohibition Justifiable?

The question of prohibition involves an inquiry as to whether local option or any form of prohibition is founded on right principles, accomplishes its purpose, diminishes or increases intemperance or otherwise does good or harm.

While its avowed object is to prevent intemperance, prohibition does not aim its restrictions at the intemperate but only at the seller. It does this because the number of sellers is comparatively small. It does not dare to attack openly the buyers or users because they would resent the interference with their rights, personal liberty and inclinations. It is content to make the seller the scape-goat over whose shoulders the law is really aimed at the purchaser, ignoring the fact that in all moral respects the seller and buyer stand on equal footing so far as the sale is concerned. It, therefore, professes one thing while it intends another and creates in fair mind a sense of injustice. The man who has bought cannot bring his conscience to declare the seller a criminal by the act of selling, while he, by act of buying, is innocent. To this extent, therefore, prohibition is not honest.

But aside from this is prohibition right and justifiable in principle? Is force the best means of making men temperate and moral? Is it right to interfere with the personal liberty of a large body of citizens and attempt to restrict them in their private conduct against their will and can such attempt succeed and do good?

Prof. Lecky says: "To attempt to guard adult men by law against temptation, to place them under a moral tutelage is a dangerous precedent. The tendency to coercive laws on all matters relating to intoxicating liquors is certainly not a tendency toward liberty."

Herbert Spencer says: "Beyond the encouragement of fraud, lying, contempt of law and conspicuous crookedness, multitudinous other evils were caused or augmented and indirect moralization was added to the direct increase of the vice aimed at."

Thomas Jefferson said: "Tell any man he shall not do a thing or have a thing and that thing becomes the very one he wishes to do or have."

Horatio Seymour said: "Intemperance cannot be expatriated by prohibitory laws; they are not consistent with sound principles of legislation. All experience shows that temperance like other virtues is not produced by law-makers but by the influence of education, morality and religion."

Samuel J. Tilden said: "It is no part of the duty of the state to coerce the individual man. Prohibition leaves no room for individual reason and conscience, nothing to self culture and substitutes the wisdom of the senate and assembly for the plan of moral government ordained by Providence."

John Quincy Adams said: "Forget not, I pray you, the right of personal freedom. Self government is the foundation of our political and social institutions and it is by self government alone that the law of temperance can be enforced. Seek not to enforce upon your brother by legislative enactments that virtue which he can only have by the dictates of his own conscience and the energy of his own free will."

Thomas T. Bayard said: "So far as my experience goes a well regulated system of license has provided the most efficient check upon the abuse of the liquor question. In many respects the question is a sumptuous one, the laws attempting to establish sumptuary regulations become inquisitorial and impossible of execution, so that in those communities where they have been enacted they have either aggravated the evil or have fallen into contempt and usefulness and been repealed."

Similar views of weight because of the prominence of the men who have expressed them, might be multiplied beyond the patience of the reader for it is the consensus of opinions of the best minds for the past hundred years that force is not the proper means of making men temperate or moral, that prohibition is wrong in principle and that men cannot be made good by the policeman's club. Dr. W. Thomas Daughtry has moved his office from his residence immediately west of the court house and north of the jail to one of the rooms in Mr. S. M. Jenkin's building on the north side of Carlisle street and adjoining the Marion Bank building. Dr. Daughtry will be pleased to meet his patients and friends in this new office.

On Monday evening, at their home on South Main street, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Wilson gave a reception to the members of the Presbyterian church, in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin Andros. The hours were from eight to eleven and quite a number of the members came to wish the happy couple well. But on account of the inclemency of the weather many remained at home. The colored string band furnished music for the occasion.

At the Baptist church the pastor preached at both hours. There was a good audience at the morning service, but at night the attendance was small owing to the rain. The subjects discussed were "The Riches and Poverty of Christ," and "The Safety of Young Men." In speaking upon the latter, Mr. Butler pointed out first several of the greatest dangers to which young men are constantly exposed. Such as bad books, evil associations, the open saloon, gambling dens, the pool room, the low theatre, etc., and then earnestly exhorted all present to shun these and seek safety alone in Christ.

Poem By the Saint

Come good people and let me tell
About the new dentist, Dr. Stilwell,
He's a pretty good fellow and very frank;
His office is over the Marion Bank.

Now if your tooth is aching and you have to dance,
Come right up and give him a chance.
If he can't save it and it raises Cain,
He will pull it, without pain.

He fills your teeth with silver and gold
And they hurt no more I am told.
He cleans them too, and such is his creed
That all of his work is guaranteed.

Now my friends if you don't believe what I say,
When your teeth need fixing come his way.
And when he is through you will think it is great.
For he has the best equipped office in this part of the state.

I see that you are now getting tired,
And if the "Boaz" comes in I will get fired.
But here's one more thing (it is on the quiet)
When the bill comes due the price will be right.

Yours,
THE SAINT.

Tobe and Grundy. One and inseparable. One and undivided. Did you ever see one that you did not see the other? The white horse and the red headed girl are not in it. One may see a horse of color, say light gray, and look in vain for red heads and see none. Of course there are the auburn hairs, but they don't count. With Tobe and Grundy everything counts and everything goes. They are right in the same class with the Siamese twins. They work together, eat together, sleep together, laugh together and sneeze together. They work better in summer than winter. The hotter the weather the harder they work. It has been told around town that several times Mr. R. W. Wilson has had to stop them at work in hot weather. Otherwise they would have died of overheating. We might speculate upon the time Cupid shoots the fatal dart. How about it then? We think the proper word at that period would be polyandry.

Colonel District of Columbia Roberts, the ever versatile literator, whose witcisms are only exceeded by his great good humor, is in town. We have noticed him in passing only. The speed with which he travels and the deep thought lines on his brow indicate to our mind that there is something doing in mineral circles. If the Colonel cannot sell a ton of flour spar to some constituent of his he may sell him a fluor spar mine or better still a cobalt mine. While we don't wish the Colonel any harm, nor would we throw a tooth pick in the way of any of his trades, yet if he were not so occupied it would be an easy matter to get from him an interesting story or two. He always lends a willing ear to an impecunious scribe in distress.

The hunting season is on. Guns and dogs and hunters now sally forth way early in the morning and tramp—tramp—tramp—all day long. Horse America Young got the hunting fever and from early morn till late at night he hunted. His home is about a mile from the court house—southerly. By coming in from the hunt from a southerly direction he avoided the necessity of a trip through town, but next morning the boys all wanted to know how many he got. He replied, "I am like the Standard Oil. By the advice of counsel I refuse to answer."

And this subject of hunting. It bears many tales. When birds are sold, of course on the sly, they generally bring from $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Mr. Sedberry, the barber, declares the birds he killed cost him $11.95 each. It was this wise. He sent to Smithland for a dog and paid passage both ways, then bought the shells and rented the gun. He missed about $3.00 of work at the shop and ruined a $3.50 pair of shoes, which he sold for 40c on credit. The account is still on credit to this day. In climbing a wire fence he tore great holes in a $1.50 pair of Sunday trousers and lost his hat. Rheumatics overtook him the day after the hunt and his doctor bill was $11.50 and he again lost his revenue to the tune of $9.85. The hunt was caused by the earnest invitation of Carl Boucher. That worthy stated that birds were plentiful. You had to kick them out of the way. All you needed was a club to knock them over. Now this wonderful hunt lasted all day long. He found birds but once in all that tramp and by good luck more than anything else knocked down three. By this time Mr. Sedberry was desperate and hungry. He got back to town too late for supper and had to give Mr. Copher 50 cents to prepare the birds. And now what you think of that? Total cost $35.85. Three birds. Cost of each bird $11.95.

There comes to this publication through some mysterious source a series of kodak pictures, which are veritable art gems in more ways than one. The pictures are varied. Some are comic and some semi-comic, none serious. There breathes through all a touch of the breezy west. One of the best known and one of the best citizens Marion ever had was an old colored man, Herod Travis. He lived in Marion for many years and the influence of that good old man is still with us and will go on for all time. Uncle Herod Travis was a hard headed, clear sighted business man of away above the average. He knew a dollar when he saw it; he knew its worth and how to keep it. Uncle Herod's name on paper made it good. It passed at the bank. He was slow in placing confidence, but when he did believe in any one he believed with all his heart. The man in whom he placed most confidence and whose advice he most frequently sought was Harry A. Haynes. Mr. Haynes owed Uncle Herod $400, and like the "barrel of beans" preacher of local fame, he was firmly convinced that "the best time to pay a debt is when a man has got the money." Accordingly he notified Herod that he wanted his note and to please bring it up so he could pay it off. Uncle Herod went home to get the I. O. U. He searched and searched. His wife joined in the search. The note could not be found and as Herod took his seat by Mr. Haynes' desk he sighed wearily. He explained their inability to find the paper and asked Mr. Haynes what about it.

"Of course, Uncle Herod," said Mr. Haynes. "If you cannot possibly find the note the debt is cancelled. You have no evidence of the debt and that relieves me of any obligation. I am very sorry for you in this misfortune, but you know a man cannot pay a note if there is no note to pay." By this time Uncle Herod's head hung low and his sigh gave evidence of depth. He arose and got as far the door when Mr. Haynes said, "Herod you and I have always been good friends and we will forego this ordeal. I will pay you the money and take your receipt." Uncle Herod's face lighted up immediately. He chuckled and laughed and went home that he and his wife might renew their confidence in the Circuit Court Clerk of Crittenden county.

The Marion Opera House will have as its next attraction "A Homespun Heart," which comes Monday Nov. 26 with its quaint characters, natural comedy and situations that take one back to their boyhood days. Hal Reid, the author, must have had an inspiration when he wrote this play. It is so true to life. It made him famous and it produces a whole lot of money all of which means success. The play is in four acts and the time between acts will be taken up with vaudeville and specialties making the performance a continuous one.

A Soldier's Letter

Captain Lawton passed the word along the line, "men get ready for the charge". Capt. Wetherill and Lieut. Goss prepared the advance for the attack. The Colt's rapid fire gun was just before the fort and opened fire, sweeping the trenches. The bugler sounded the charge, and the whole command rushed up with a yell. A yell that filled with victory and fight—such a yell no foot ball team never knew. Up they went to the lip of the crater and over the flank of the crater. The lip of the crater and the crater itself down below were swarming with Moros. Some of them were frightful, while the faces of others were as inexpressive as that of the Moro who sells pearls shells or knives to the Americans in Jolo, but poured the Moros with white rags upon their heads. (A consecration of the heads.) The women rushed with them, cursing and handling the bolos.

Then occurred a hand-to-hand, cold steel conflict, the Moros rushing at the Americans with their deadly barongs, their knives and spears. They fought like fiends. Few had the opportunity to close as the Americans pumped their guns desperately and the Moros fell by dozens. Some of the men rushed in between the Moros and their trenches. A private snapped his revolver at an enraging Moro but each time it failed him. Quick as thought he clubbed his gun and hit the Moro, crushing his head like a paper shell, knocking the huge knife a dozen feet away. It was desperate, gasping, and sweaty work, and the American was the better man in any kind of fight.

Another Moro, wounded to death, seized a spear and drove it through the skull of a native child with such force that the head of the spear came out under the chin and ran into the child's shoulder breaking off the steel. But these were incidents of the blood red mist.

In ten minutes it was all over, and the Americans cheered over their victory, such cheer as none who has never been on the battle field may know. Five soldiers lay dead, and a large number were severely wounded. The number of Moros killed in this cotta was probably 350, or very close to it. The trenches and the lip of the cotta was covered with the dead and in the trenches the dead were three and four and sometimes five deep. Besides the fire from the cotta, an attack was made from the lip of the crater itself down below. The Americans shot the Moros down from all sides. In fact in half an hour there was not a living Moro either in the cotta or along the eastern side of the crater. Capt. Lawton sent a detachment along the lip of the crater under the command of Capt. Bolles, sixth Infantry to see if there were any left. Every house in the crater was shelled like a sieve by the Colt's automatic gun, but the Moros managed to fight like fiends, even when dying. They struck out with their last breath, and the knife cuts quick and sharp, and with little effort.

In the battle three or four Americans were killed by Moros who feigned death, and other Americans were wounded by the same method. Our soldiers did not fire into wounded as Kitchener's men did, and so the Americans lost their lives and were wounded. Of course where the Moros were all packed in the trenches firing upon the Americans, many wounded as well as unhurt Moros were killed when the trenches were afflicted.

That night I had the honor of meeting Capt. Lawton—a braver or kinder man never lived. He had not slept for thirty six hours, it was said. Probably he had eaten little or nothing. He was cool, mentally calm, physically nervous, active in caring for the wounded in the temporary hospital, but terribly depressed over the loss of his men and the death of the women and children in the trenches. Later in the night I rode into the town to get hospital supplies, returning before dawn. My journey proved useless as Capt. George Langhorn had sent out cargadores, (tag-gage carriers) with all the supplies that was to be had, and I could get no more supplies; but the trip proved to the writer at least, that the average civilian however brave he thinks he is he is not as brave as the soldier who is trained to danger. I saw two or three Moros in the moonlight in the cane-brake, and I was pretty sure they were hostiles, as friendly Moros would not venture out without an American escort, for fear of being shot on suspicion by the packmasters who were constantly traveling along the trails between Dajo and Jolo. I stepped under the shade of a rubber tree and pulled out my Colt's 45. My horse stepped on a bamboo and it cracked like a pistol shot. The Moros started to run at angle that would cut across my path, so I whipped away in the white moonlight of the tropics straight through the country on my back track. Now a sergeant who rode in came on with several Moros and prepared to shoot them up, but they proved to be a lot of cargadores who were going out to bring the dead and wounded. The soldiers built a great fire on the hill of Dajo that night. It lit up the ghastly trenches of the dead. It flared among the great trees of Dajo and reached towards the heavens with a glow. The Moros on hundreds of hills saw it, and they knew at last, after centuries they were finally to be conquered. When dawn broke the soldiers were gathered around the trenches taken the night before. A half dozen Moro children played on the blankets of the soldiers' and one little hungry fellow was shivering with cold and hunger, there were two women wounded and all around were the bloody-mouthed, frightful, rigid dead. Within two feet of the children were the body of six American soldiers, covered with a tarpaulin. They were fine looking young boys—most of these soldiers were eighteen or twenty years old, and many of them had never been in a battle before, yet they had rushed into a hand-to-hand combat to meet as certain a death as a soldier may know.

Long before the fog had drifted from the summit of Dajo that morning, March 8th, Captain Lawton had begun his advance on the cotta on the north side of the crater, under orders of Colonel Duncan received about two o'clock that morning. The first excitement was over now, now it was business. This was the third and last cotta to be taken. The advance was a detachment of company B Nineteenth Infantry, commanded by Lieut. Bissel, they took along a Colt's rapid fire gun and posted it up and started to shell the cotta at a very short distance. Now one man had brought a rapid fire gun up the hill, and he was a volunteer in the fighting—Ensign Cook, of the United States Steamer Pampanga, Ensign Cook in taking the gun up was shot in the foot, and was relieved by Cadet Hayward. The noise of the rapid fire gun was almost like that of a bunch of fire crackers exploding. Then the men already under fire advanced so close to the Moros that they charged and many of them fell back in the trench, but they had reached its edge.

The trenches were full of Moros, occasionally a black hand would be seen over the parapet and shooter would snap at it.

A Moro boy apparently eleven or twelve years old, swift and supple, limber and lean as a deer, charged with drawn bolo upon six of our men, and fell within six feet of them. A woman made a charge and fell pierced with bullets. The firing became intermittent.

The morning sun began to hite and the sweat dripped from the men's faces and fell on their khaki trousers. Still foggers leaped like tiger, with knives flourishing. Lieut. Bissel and several other men rushed to the charge of the cotta and struck the parapet, and there came a burst of rifle firing. One man with a baby under his arm and a pole in the other hand, leaped over the cotta and was shot in a dozen places before he touched the ground. Bissel's men fell back and again rallied. Bissel saved a man's life by shooting a Moro just as he was about to cleave the soldier with his barong.

Then brave Joseph Fitz, of the gunboat Pampanga, climbed onto a tree with revolver sticking in his belt, and getting up the tree emptied the revolver into the Moros in the trenches. This was the only way the Moros not yet killed could be fired on from above. "There are almost three or four of them yet captain", cried Fitz, so a general advance was made; and the Moros were shot down. Great credit must be given for the way in which the trench was taken, for by the action of Fitz many lives were saved. The third and the last cotta had been taken. And the battle was practically over in the forenoon of March 8th.

In this story there is only told the work of Lawton's column. The other two columns, under Capt. Koehler, fourth cavalry, and Major Bundy experienced as trying times as did Capt. Lawton's column although his loss was the greatest. All three of the trails are steep and precipitous and it would fatigue a man in good condition to climb any of them. At the top of Lawton's trail, however the hill is broader and offered an opportunity for them to charge. Splendid work was done by the Moro constabulary, or native police of the Philippines, an organization which does every conceivable thing, both civil and military, with admirable efficiency, which has been shamefully abused, but which is every where in the Philippines the most useful organization in the Islands.

Captain White commanding the constabulary, cleared the trail for Bundy's column and was wounded. Lieut. Sowers in command worked a sawed off shot gun with wonderful effect upon top of the trail. The number of Moros dead is variously estimated. It is impossible to give the exact number. The trench captured by Capt. Lawton probably held three hundred and fifty Moros, and that was my estimate at the time. The other two trenches held 150 and 450 more dead. The number altogether, including many who were killed in the brush and at the side trenches, was probably closer to one thousand than six hundred, the original estimate.

Weird stories from all parts of the battle field were told the writer the night of the combat. The Moro women fought more desperately than the men. One could not tell them from the men. One horrible photograph I have shows a woman with her hair cut short. One saw a Filipino cut a Moro woman into with one slash of a bolo. Others saw Moros kill their own children or use them as shields in the fight. One soldier said that an American soldier wanting to end the fight there, jumped down into the trench and killed every one who attacked him, shooting his revolver and stabbing with his bayonet in the heat of the battle. Of course he was badly wounded. A Moro woman threw her baby at a soldier, and then made at him with a barong. She was shot down. A Moro threw his baby on a row of bayonets, and as it stuck on one he jumped and killed the soldier behind the bayonet. Private Packard, troop, K. 4th. Cav. was the man killed. A brave hospital corps man was slain while applying, "first aid" to the injured soldiers. His duty was not on the firing line but he was there. Now the Americans who jumped into the trenches and killed indiscriminately may have been cowardly or they may have been brave, but it seems to me that it takes a brave man to leap to almost certain death, among people who will spring back when mortally wounded, and slash viciously with a knife, hoping to get in one death blow as they draw their last breath.

Frequently the Moros would fire on the soldiers sent out to rescue the wounded Moros who were without weapons, and take them to the field hospital where their wounds could be dressed by the surgeon.

How could the Americans do otherwise than they did, the Moros did not fight according to the rules of modern warfare.

It is impossible for one who was not there to conceive the viciousness and treachery of their attacks. While the sight of the trenches were shocking in the extreme to even harden the nerves, it was more then pitiful to see the American dead. The Americans were fortunate in losing so few men. Yet if the Moros had used as good judgment in the fight as our men did, hundreds of Americans would have been slaughtered. It was due to the almost impregnable position of the Moros that the loss of life to our soldiers was so severe, and the wonder of it is that no more of the Americans were killed. It was impossible for the American soldiers to leave the Moros longer in the crater of Bud-Dajo, as their number was being continually augmented. It was impracticable to try and starve them out, with their springs of water and their great amount of stores they had gathered for the fight. A siege would have been impracticable, too, for the reason that the remaining Moros in the Islands, if they thought that it was impossible for the Americans to win the fight, might have made a fanatical attack on the Americans and massacred the whole garrison.

It is said by those who have lived in the Philippines for the last six years that this battle practically ends the fighting in the Islands. Wherever in Mindanao the Moros have been thoroughly defeated and the Dattos have been humiliated, the Moros have transferred their allegiance to the Americans.

There is great difference of opinion as to whether the Moros watching the battle were friendly or unfriendly. Lieut. Dorey reported during the fight that an agitator had visited the Moros near Koehler's camp urging a bolo attack on the men there.

This was immediately reported to Koehler and Colonel Duncan and the camp was at once reinforced. About 10:30 A. M. March 8th, the Sultan of Sulu, with a large following, appeared near Capt. Koehler's camp. Lieut. Dorey, in charge sent word that he would be very glad to see the Sultan, who was only one hundred yards away. The Sultan returned the word that he was very tired, having ridden from Mabung ten miles away, and started back to Mabon. His men were fully armed, and said they had been boar hunting, but it looked as if they had been waiting for an American reverse.

Republican Campaign Text-Book

A departure has been made in the Republican Campaign Text-Book just issued, in that its contents are wholly devoted to live issues, and these are treated in the briefest possible way, yet comprehensively enough to include all necessary facts and figures.

First, there is a general statement of the issues of 1904, followed by a brief review of Republican legislation in general and the work of the Fifty-ninth Congress in particular. The Railroad Rate Law, Pure Food Law, Free Alcohol Law, Employers' Liability Law and the Meat Inspection Law are given in full, as is Chairman Tamm's clear explanation of the appropriations.

The Labor question is next fully presented, followed by Representative Watson's exposition of Anti-Trust proceedings. About one hundred pages are given to the Tariff, Agriculture and Manufactures, and the tables showing the various phases of industrial activity. Among other subjects treated under the tariff are: Protection and Free Trade, Customs Revenue, Foreign Commerce, Home Market and Internal Trade, Wages and Prices, Export Discounts, Reciprocity, Free Hides, Revision, etc., etc. Some half hundred tables give official and authoritative figures down to the latest possible date. The work of the president and administration is then briefly presented, the condition and status of the Philippines, the Panama Canal, the Navy, Postal Service, Irrigation, etc., etc.

The President's letter to Representative Watson concludes the work, which has a copious index of over a dozen pages.

Scattered throughout the book are quotations from President Roosevelt and other Republican leaders. Among these is the extract from Senator Hanna's speech where he used the "stand pat" expression, it being the only instance in the Text-Book where the words "stand pat" are used. A page is given to Mr. Bryan and his view, with the comments of the New York World. A so-called "Property Postscript" is added, giving treasury conditions, trade reports, etc., down to August 1.

For the first time in a political campaign, the Text-Book will have a general circulation, as together with other literature, it will be sent on receipt of one dollar by John C. Eversman, Assistant Treasurer, 1133 Broadway, New York.

A PROSPECTOR'S THANKSGIVING

I'd been prospectin' for half a year
In the roughest luck
A man ever struck,

THANKSGIVING

For beauty of the generous earth;
For small misdeeds, joys and mirth;
For large content in little wealth;
For looks, but just, and for health;
For every good that money sends,
And best of all—for friends,
—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

SUMPTUOUS REPAST OF HALF A CENTURY AGO.

Tastes of Our Ancestors Seem to Have Been for Heavy Dishes and Many of Them.

At Thanksgiving time so much is heard of old-fashioned dinners that it may be interesting to readers to hear what the term signified in Philadelphia some years ago.

About 50 years ago a large dinner was very different to what it is now. In the first place courses, such as we know them, were practically unknown, even in the wealthiest houses there was rarely anything but soup preceding the actual dinner, but this soup was generally very rich.

Such a dinner consisted about as follows: First a handsome silver-covered soup tureen was placed on the table filled with mock turtle or perhaps venison soup, and all were plentifully helped, the great silver tureen, corresponding to the tureen, doing good service. After the soup plates were removed a great roast turkey decked with celery and cranberries and marvellously trussed and dressed was placed at one end of the table while at the other was a large piece of a la mode beef on a platter. Roast duck and apple sauce sometimes took the place of a la mode beef but the two ends of the table had always their respective meats or poultry. Sweet and white potatoes and every sort of vegetable to be had obtained a place on the festive board, while cunning moulds of cranberries and jellies and gravies, pickles and the like were in abundance.

There was generally what was known as an "oyster pie"—steamed oysters served in a puff-paste shell the rich dressing of the oysters being made thick with eggs. There was no salad course, but of dessert there was no dearth. Pumpkin pie, mince pie, and always a well-dormented constructed meringue and either jelly or custard, sometimes both served in glasses, while plates and nutcrackers were handed around for the nuts.

The centerpiece was invariably a great pyramid of fruits arranged on a cut-glass or Dresden china epergne, and when the table was very long there were sometimes two of these fruit pyramids.

A little later after the guests had adjourned to the drawing room, coffee and fancy cakes were served to them there. There were no little after-dinner coffee cups in those days but generous breakfast sizes of finest French eggshell china often exquisitely hand-painted with landscapes or tickled out in gold.

When there was a large party of young people, a separate table was set for them in the small library, which in those days, was generally built back of the dining room, the latter being in the back building of the second floor, corresponding to the library or sitting room of today.

The back parlor was used only as a such then or as a breakfast room, the state dining room being invariably upstairs, and sometimes there was not even a dumb-waiter to assist in carrying things up from the kitchen below, so that a large dinner was no easy matter to serve in those days of large families and lavish hospitality.

DOUBLE CAUSE FOR JOY.

"Lisa—We certainly ought to be thankful for this turkey today.
Zeke—Yes, and thank so that I don't get away with it without being caught."

"Mock Turkey" for Thanksgiving.
A novel suggestion for a Thanksgiving party is a "Mock Turkey." One was made last year by taking a knitted basket and covering it with brown hollard. The handle of the basket ran lengthwise, thus serving as an excellent breast bone for the turkey. The brown hollard was artistically adjusted to simulate legs, wings and a neck. It was then tinted to the requisite shades by the liberal use of burnt umber paint. The stuffing of this turkey consisted of trifling gifts, accompanied with appropriate rhymes. The "carving" of the turkey was attended with much pleasant excitement. The operation consisted in making strenuous preparations for it, then suddenly with a dextrous movement of the fork, lifting the entire "skin," laying bare the interesting "stuffing."

Look Ahead.
If turkey day should find you glum—
We can't all be in clover—
Reflect that better days will come;
Be thankful—the worst is over.
